Tommy Brown has just arrived in a new city! However, he's completely unfamiliar with this city, and is a bit anxious about travelling onto new roads.

Tommy decides to download our app so he can properly find the best ways to get around the city. He looks around for a good restaurant and bar.

The app shows him the easiest way to get to that perfect place: a combination public transit and walking. The reviews of the streets are quite decent, so he travels using those roads.

After he gets there, he has a great time! He drinks for a while, and eventually decides to head back to his hotel.

On the way home, he once again uses our app. However, the roads he walked on the way to the bar are now marked as potentially dangerous. Instead, the app recommends to stay on more populated roads.

Finally, he gets back to his hotel. The app recommends him to rate the streets he walked on, although he taps it away as he passes out on the bed.

Zoe McCuen Storyboard

Emma is a teacher who loves to walk to school and around the city of Chicago often for her health and to help the environment.

She always gets nervous at night to walk around the city and is looking for an app to help her find safe streets around her. She is also in a cold area and needs to make sure she knows when it is

Emma found the app SafeWalk which gives weather alerts, level of safety of streets, and finds the fastest route for her walks. This is perfect for Emma since she walks so much and needs to feel safe and prepared in such a big city.

Emma recommends this app to all of her friends since there is location sharing available and she can make sure they are all getting home safely. She also tells them to add any ratings for streets they were on to make sure that dangerous or hazardous streets can be avoided.
